STAY OF ACTION
IN OUSTER CASERuling Is Handed Down

OFFICIAL NOTICEAction Comes On Heels
Of Appellate Court
Ouster Order

LISBON, Sept. 4.—Robert S. Wheatley, ousted yesterday by the appellate court as Columbiana county engineer, immediately filed notice of appeal in the supreme court and held today an indefinite stay of the ouster order.

Wheatley's removal was ordered because he was not a registered engineer at the time of his election last fall, the suit being instituted by Lloyd C. Kirk, Republican, who was defeated for re-election.

Kirk contested Wheatley's election but lost. Wheatley, a Democrat, then filed mandamus action to make Kirk turn over the office to him. Kirk complied but struck back by filing the complaint for Wheatley's ouster.

The stay of execution was secured from the supreme court yesterday by Wheatley's counsel in Columbus.

Wheatley shortly afterwards put up $1,500 bond required in the action. Official notice of the stay of execution was received today at the courthouse here.

Citizenship Issue
Is Outstanding In Pasco Court Suit

LISBON, Sept. 4.—Failure to secure citizenship papers may bar Sam Pasco of Salem from a civil service job he lost when Frank K. Wilson, Salem service director, died, charged him August 11.

About ten days ago Pasco filed a petition for a writ of mandamus asking Common Pleas Judge W. F. Lones to reinstate him. Pasco, in his petition, stated he had qualified under the city's civil service regulations and that the requirements called for a written complaint and a hearing. He stated he had received neither.

The action was heard by Judge Lones Friday following a week's continuance. Counsel for the service director argued that Pasco was not a citizen and therefore not entitled to a civil service rating. The plaintiff admitted he had made no effort to secure naturalization papers in spite of the fact he had resided in this country for 25 years. He had been employed as a repairman by the waterworks department since 1914.

After members of the civil service commission had testified the judge reserved his decision, stating it would be handed down in a written opinion.

Noted German Flier Survives After Air Race Crash

Count Otto von Hagenburg of Germany, internationally famous stunt flier, provided an unexpected thrill for 50,000 spectators at the air races in Cleveland yesterday when his ship crashed while flying upside down. The German ace today was reported suffering no serious injuries beyond scratches and a shaking up.

(By Associated Press)
SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 4.—The trail of two desperate bandits cooled today despite the efforts of a police army seeking to avenge the deaths of two officers and the wounding of another.

State highway patrolmen, county officers and police vainly combed a cornfield in which a woman said two men disappeared after demanding the keys to her automobile. Disbanding the posse again spread out after their dash to the North Lewisburg field, 25 miles north of here.

Police guns also brought down the fourth, Harry Chapman of Chicago, reported in a critical condition, wounded in the heart and shoulder. Police Prosecutor Abe Gardner attempted to question him but decided to wait until later today because of Chapman's condition. Gardner sought the identity of the pair who escaped.

GERMAN AIRMAN
ESCAPES DEATHPlane Crashes, But Count
Hagenburg Crawls Out
With Minor Hurts

By DEVON FRANCIS

Associated Press Aviation Editor
CLEVELAND, Sept. 4.—By all the ramifying rules of gravity, Count Otto Hagenburg of Germany, a nerveless gentleman who does tricks with airplanes, had no right today to be around begging for a machine to take aloft.

The count crashed late yesterday.

It was one of those rare accidents when the packed stands at the National Air Races turns its collective head away and closes its ears to the shriek of the ambulance, certain that death has called off its holiday. But the dust had not settled around his ship when he crawled out and waved to the crowd.

They had to carry his machine away in a basket.

Billed as a death-defying acrobatic flier, the man who won the trick flying contest in the international meet at Zurich, Switzerland, last July had just completed a half-loop and was swooping down completely inverted when he struck.

Wing Saves Life

The upper wing of his biplane apparently saved his life. Head down, hanging by his cockpit harness, Hagenburg was dragged along the ground for 15 feet, the top wing—nearest the ground in the maneuver—breaking his drop.

A half hour later, his head swathed in bandages, he returned from the field hospital at the municipal airport to beg Alexander Papana, of the Roumanian Royal Air Force, for the loan of his ship. "I'm on the program Saturday," he explained.

The accident, the second one in 24 hours—Lee Miles was killed in a crash Thursday—all but eclipsed interest in the finish of the Bendix transcontinental race, America's long distance air derby classic.

Flying a stripped down Seversky pursuit ship, Frank Fuller, San Francisco sportsman, streaked in from Burbank in 7 hours and 55

LEETONIA, Sept. 4.—Neil J. McKeefrey, former executive of the McKeefrey Iron Co., now retired, repulsed the efforts of two hold-up men last night at his home, 110 Walnut st.

McKeefrey and his sister, Miss Elizabeth B. McKeefrey, live together. The former was seated in the library at his home at 10:30 last night and his sister was in another room listening to a radio program.

Hold-up Men Enter Home
The two bandits entered the home and went first to the room in which Miss McKeefrey sat.

One of them told her to keep quiet. The other started for the library.

McKeefrey heard muffled expressions coming from the other room and started to get up. As he did so, one of the men, masked and brandishing a revolver, strode in.

"This is a hold-up!" he warned McKeefrey, and then directed the latter to step outside.

But McKeefrey disregarded the order. Again the holdup man ordered McKeefrey out and this time he warned the Leetonian he would shoot.

"Shoot and be damned!" said McKeefrey and reached for a small clock nearby, with the intention of letting the bandit have it.

Screams Rout Invaders

At this juncture, Miss McKeefrey screamed, loudly.

The bandits hesitated just a moment, turned suddenly and darted through the door.

McKeefrey promptly notified authorities but today was disposed to take the whole episode lightly. "I don't regard it very seriously," he said. "More likely a crude joke or the efforts of misguided pranksters."

Yoder, manager of the western press division, to the post of local manager in the San Francisco offices of NBC, with jurisdiction over station KPO and KGO.

"Mr. Yoder's appointment," Gilman said, "follows years of service rendered to radio, and his long experience in meeting the press and public."

"For the present Mr. Yoder will also continue to supervise the work of the Western Press Division."

COUNTY LOSES
ITS CCC CAMPLisbon Organization To Be Discontinued On September 30

According to a notice received yesterday by Albert Peck, camp superintendent, the Lisbon CCC camp is one of the five civilian conservation corps camps to be discontinued in Ohio Sept. 30, 1937.

The camp was established on the county home farm west of Lisbon on Aug. 25, 1935, and a few days later began to work with local farmers interested in the soil conservation program.

During the last two years 98 farmers representing about 10,000 acres have cooperated with the camp to put into effect soil and water saving ideas on their farms.

The closing of this camp is in line with the policy of the soil conservation service to keep a camp in a community until a working demonstration of its plans has been set up and then move the camp to a new area where similar work is needed.

This, it is felt, should take not over two years for each area. The 98 cooperating farms in Columbiana county are scattered fairly evenly throughout the county so that any farmer who is interested in soil conserving methods can observe them on farms in his own neighborhood.

Technicians of the camp and the county agricultural agent are planning an all-day tour of several cooperating farms in Center and Elk-run townships on Sept. 8. Anyone is welcome to join this tour and see the various methods of soil and water conservation applied to these farms.

Salem will be host to approximately 5,000 visitors Sunday and Monday when the seventh biennial saengerfest of the Transylvania Saxon Saengerbund of America is held.

The vanguard of visitors started arriving today. Many are expected to find places to stay at private homes. Hotels and tourist homes also will provide rooms.

At Country Club
Scene of the activities will be the Saxon Country club on the New-garden road. Anticipating huge crowds at the club, officials in charge of the program here have erected two large tents on the grounds.

Twenty-seven singing societies, including Salem's own Maennerchor and Damemchor, will participate in competitive singing the first day of the convention. About 1,000 singers are represented in the various groups.

The singing societies will join in massed chorus songs as the highlight of the program on Monday.

General director for the song programs will be Jacob Faust, of Canton, who leads both the Salem Maennerchor and Damemchor. Emil Rinken-dorf of Alliance will wield the baton for the symphony orchestra.

John Bahmiller is chairman of the committees which completed arrangements for the song fest. Michael Schwartz is festival manager, Albert Fischer, festival secretary, and Daniel Weber, publicity chairman.

Bahmiller, who is president of the Salem Maennerchor, will deliver the address of welcome Sunday afternoon. Another welcome address will be made by Stephen Klausenburger, of Detroit, president of the Saengerbund.

State Senator John Taylor of Salem has been designated by Gov. Martin L. Davey to speak in behalf of the state of Ohio.

CCC Soil Service
To Be Inspected

Columbiana County farmers will have an opportunity to view the work being done by the soil conservation service of the CCC Camp and observe practices of a number of farmers in the growing of alfalfa, improving pastures, and growing soybeans and other crops on a farm tour to be made on Thursday, September 9.

The tour will begin at 9 a. m. at the farm of Ernest Moser, 5 miles west of Lisbon. Other farms to be visited include those operated by Clayton Bowman, Wade Huffman, Harley Morlan, Harry Bowman, James Roush and Carl Conkle. These farms are located in Center, Elkrun and Patrolman townships. The tour has been arranged by Floyd Lower, county extension agent.

Potato growers of Columbiana and Mahoning counties will hold a similar tour on Wednesday, Sept. 8, visiting the farms of potato growers of the two counties. The tour will start at 9 a. m. at the farm of Sam Tritton, four miles west of Lisbon.

Operators of other farms to be visited are Barnett Graham & Son, Firestone Farms, C. H. Welsh, Howard Hartman and J. C. Summers. A large number of potato growers are expected to go on the tour.

Bullets No Avail,
Officer Uses Feet

Patrolman Clifford Todd's bullets didn't stop a fleeing prisoner, but his flying feet did.

Pennsylvania railroad employees complained of three men loitering at the station, and Todd responded and ordered the trio into the police cruiser.

Two complied but the third man, Kenneth Bowles, 40, of East Palestine, fled. Patrolman Todd fired several shots in the air, but Bowles ran around the National Sanitary plant.

The officer then did more than a double time and Bowles, too, was on his way to the police station.

Bowles, charged with resisting an officer and intoxication, was fined $25 and costs. The other two East Palestine men were fined $5 and costs each.

WELCOME, SAXONS

Tomorrow and Monday the City of Salem will be host to several thousand Transylvanian Saxons at the seventh biennial saengerfest. Literally, the Salem saengerfest enacts the role of host, but, actually, the entire city is happy to share this honor.

As the name signifies, the occasion will be a "song-fest", two days devoted almost entirely to music. It brings to the average citizen a new conception of a many-versed people.

In the words of John Bahmiller, president of the Salem Maennerchor, "we sing because we love to; because we realize that America has become cultural, tolerant, great; because each nationality has given to America the best it can give. We are trying to project ourselves into every phase of American life."

Those who know them, and are familiar with their industry, their thriftiness, their loyalty, know without question they are fully qualified for the American life.

Salem is proud to welcome the Transylvanian Saxons, not only on the occasion of their biennial saengerfest, but at any time they choose to visit the city.

LABOR DAY, 1937

As Labor days have come and gone with the passage of years in the industrial growth of the United States, each one has been a special occasion for reviews of labor's accomplishments and its aims.

There has been compiled, step by step, an impressive record of progress toward fulfillment of the workingman's proper destiny in a democratic civilization. In political and economic rights and in contributions to the materialistic evidence of civilization, labor has earned a dignity and an importance which, Americans rightfully believe, are unequalled anywhere else on earth.

This unique raising of the dignity of labor has not been brought about without clashes of opinion and policy, inevitable in a country that guarantees freedom of expression and action. Labor, within itself, has experienced stresses and strains which sometimes handicapped it at the time, but which later could be discounted as valuable experience.

If one thing were to be chosen as being important above all others as the result of decades of striving to reach a more perfect adjustment, it might be this: In the United States, labor is a condition of life, not a separate class of citizenship.

What is called the laboring class is not a proletarian bloc, as it would be classified abroad. Most Americans have had the experience of common labor at some time or other in their lives. Most of the managers and capitalists of industry started as workers. Their success as executives and as financiers depends wholly on their ability to serve workers, who are their producers and consumers.

During the past year there has been unusual activity in organization of workers into unions. A substantial minority of the working population has been brought under the control of union leadership, and many still unorganized workers have been confronted with the issue of unionization. Because it is their problem, because it has been made a political question and because the problems of labor are the problems of the nation, it must be faced realistically.

The ultimate outcome of what is happening is uncertain. Some are apprehensive, because they fear that in some way American labor may plunge into the pitfall of proletarianism—or be plunged into it by leaders who stand to gain something by creation of an illusion of class distinction which never actually has existed outside the fevered imaginations of persons applying old world thought to new world conditions.

Hope for harmonious adjustment is sustained by faith in the composite character of workers in the United States. In 150 years they never have betrayed themselves as free citizens by letting themselves be bound to their condition. They will not do so voluntarily now.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Turning out one of these tiddle-de-wink columns—such as this—one never knows which way a thought will jump. For instance: Vaguely in shifting the typewriter carriage I thought of referring to a sundown we saw near Long Beach last evening.

But almost everything has been said about the exquisite red rapture of a dying day. Then in a stop-skip manner this vagrant fancy came bob-bob-bobbing along: The Saturday Evening Post is showing great editorial vigor under its youthful editor, Wesley Winans Stout.

That job was literally seven league boots to fill. I recall playing poker a time or so with Stout in younger days. He was an amiable fellow but one you would picture for the job he now holds. Editorial brilliance often flares with opportunity.

Poker reminds me that one of the surprising new publishing sensations—not Henry Luce—is an ardent addict of draw. Two days every month he knocks off work and joins a group of friends in an Atlantic City hotel for a 48 hour stretch of the game. Napping when exhausted.

The most enthusiastic poker players I have ever known were cartoonists—the late Clare Briggs, Jean

Knott and H. T. Webster. A runner-up was Dr. George Dorsey, who wrote "Why We Behave Like Human Beings." Poker was the only gambling game, in fact the only game of any sort, I ever really enjoyed. But I was cured of it in a sickening manner.

It was like this: Our poker crowd consisted mostly of newspapermen and artists. When I was a press agent at the Hotel Majestic we usually gathered around the green baize there in what was elegantly called the Louis XVI Room, every Friday night. Someone brought a personable young fellow into the game and he came regularly, winning with astonishing consistency. Several grew suspicious. One finally caught him cheating and it was decided at next session he would be exposed. Came the dramatic moment. Trapped, he turned the sickly white of a flounder's belly and confessed. He offered to pay back and we learned he was the support of a mother, wife and sister—all invalids. He was desperate. Our poker gang broke up and I never touched a card from that day.

A world of strange phobias. I am told of a man of industrial prominence who will not permit a letter to him sealed with wax opened. He had a hideous dream one night that some enemy sent him a deadly spider under a wax seal, so vivid he never got over it. On the other hand there is Diego Rivera, communistic Mexican artist, who eats flies and sundry bugs—I saw him with my own eyes indulge such an appetite at Theodore Dreiser's one night. And he declared a poisonous spider the most delectable of all. He would walk a mile to taste a "red widow."

One of America's great reporters and one least heard about by the general public is Jim Mills, of the Associated Press. Most of his activities have been in Europe where he has covered every important assignment in the past 25 years. He is white haired now, gentle, kindly, and has delivered many scoops but never brags of such triumphs. Such reporters do not expect applause of work well done. They are the real journalists of whom the profession is mightily proud.

Nobody could shake my belief in the stability of true friendship. I have had several experiences of being unjustly bludgeoned. In no instance did I ever strike back or seek to defend myself, but on each occasion I was fairly swamped by gestures of loyalty. Nothing in a life, unusually dandy, has been so warming.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, September 5

Sunday's horoscope is conspicuous for the prospect of major events drastically affecting the affairs of church and state, labor, property, as well as all manner of secret, fraternal or political organizations. These are all under excellent auspices for notable performances, but, at the same time, there are elements of fraud, duplicity as well as turbulence, violence and devastation to be met and handled strategically.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of conspicuous, sudden and memorable adventures affecting vitally the future and its fortunes. While prospects are excellent for advancement, increased finances, enhanced prestige and popularity, with much solidarity in high and potent friendships, yet there are omens of duplicity, fraud, intrigue as well as sudden disruptive, turbulent and passionate occurrences to jeopardize the propitious auguries.

A child born on this day may have a rather remarkable character and disposition, with originality, ingenuity, shrewdness and many talents for attaining wealth, high popularity and prestige, possibly fame. But, at the same time, it may be impulsive, turbulent, aggressive and passionate. It may have a most adventurous and romantic life.

For Monday, September 6

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly lively, progressive and adventurous day, despite certain very definite and stubborn obstacles, delays, impediments and difficulties to be carefully but resolutely met and disposed of. Perseverance, determination as well as tact may be instrumental in eliminating such obstructions and problems, making way for high adventure if not sensational romance in the private affections.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very lively, exciting, progressive and even sensationally adventurous or romantic year. Radical influences are at work to undermine current stagnations, obstructions or stubborn oppositions or treacheries. Persistence and sagacity should dispose of these to make way for definite business progress as well as romantic denouements or sensational adventures in the private life.

A child born on this day may be unusually versatile and gifted with intellectual and inventive powers of genius. It may follow a career of adventure or public service.

CAISSON'S DISEASE

RECENTLY I read an interesting report about the construction of the vehicular tunnel being built under the Hudson river and connecting New York with New Jersey.

Perhaps the most outstanding part of the report was that relating to the marked precautions taken to prevent Caisson's disease. Caisson's disease, commonly called the "bends" by workmen, is a strange and unusual affliction. It is produced by sudden changes in atmospheric pressure. For this reason it used to be extremely prevalent among those employed in under-water tunnels, or working in great depth below sea level.

Exposure to increased atmospheric pressure is dangerous. It exerts damaging influence on the mechanism of the body. It is a danger that must be avoided if possible.

Unpleasant Effects
Men who work in underground tunnels and below sea level are subject to unpleasant effects. Bubbles of air form in the blood with evil consequences to heart and blood stream. Indeed, there may be permanent damage and even loss of life.

At first the sufferer complains of severe headache, earache and dizziness. These symptoms are followed by an acute attack of "bends." Now there is terrific pain in the muscles and joints. The victim actually bends over in his agony. He requires immediate medical attention.

Today, as a result of our improved knowledge concerning Caisson's disease and other similar disorders, certain precautions are taken to prevent them. It is now known that if the exposure to pressure is gradual, the body adjusts itself and no ill effects occur.

To accomplish this, a special device, consisting of air-tight chambers, is provided. The workmen go from one chamber to another until there is a physical adjustment to the gradually increased pressure.

Carefully Examined

In addition to this precaution,

UNCLE ABNER SAYS:

We kin all sit back and relax now. Them Washington fellers have finally figured out which way a pig's tail curls.

Guess Lufe Hawkins and his gang will be put to work studyin' which way the worm turns.

The men are carefully examined physically, to determine the exact state of heart and lungs. If any defects are discovered in the men, they are not permitted to engage in this work. Further, men engaged in such construction are permitted to do so only for a definite and limited length of time.

As a result of these precautions, few if any casualties are now encountered in the building of such modern engineering achievements as the new tunnel being constructed under the Hudson river. Medical science has made great strides in the prevention of avoidable accidents. We are indebted to men who work at these hazardous jobs, and to the scientists who have made their work safe.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Half-past two. She was ready! "Good-by," she whispered with a farewell look about her little suite. Ten minutes later, in the nebulous dawn, she was sitting in Gold-stein's sled, wrapped in a warm blanket. The icy air bit at her cheeks and stung refreshingly in her nostrils. Behind her on the runners stood the trapper, cracking a long whip over the backs of his huskies. Ahead of her the string of dim, wolflike shapes went racing southward along the frozen Eukine trail.

Denny relaxed in her warm fur robes, secure now in the certainty of escape. For a while she was aware of the vague, bundled form of Lizzie facing her from the front of the sled, of the dim, waving tails of the huskies, the crack of the whip, the squeak of sled runners. But soon the soothing monotony of steady movement through the darkness made her drowsy and she dozed.

She woke to find the sun rising behind the eastern peaks, filling every hollow of the range with heart-warming rose.

The pure beauty of the winter dawn was entrancing.

The trail kept to the river for the part, swinging to avoid hummocks and rough ice. Occasionally deep drift forced Stebbins to turn the team aside and climb the embankment. It was on such a detour that the wheel dog, struggling in the shafts against the heavy side of the sled, missed his footing, and Stebbins suddenly shattered the beauty of the morning by shouting an obscene epithet that made Denny cringe. It was so at variance with his hitherto guarded words of direction that she thought for a moment she had been tricked into some grotesque mis-hearing. But immediately he ripped out another phrase which sent her mithered hands up over her ears.

She was shocked and indignant at the same time a vague uneasiness kept her from speaking her mind. At the beginning of the journey it had been too dark to see the trapper clearly, and she had caught no glimpse of him since, because he was always at the back of the sled. Now she had an impulse to look at the man.

Not wishing to be obvious at this, she leaned forward, under the pretext of rearranging her robes, and peered at him from under her bent arm. What she saw gave her a sick pang in the pit of her stomach.

Stebbins was holding a half-smugly quart bottle of rum to his mouth in a prolonged pull. When he lowered his congested face to put it back into his mackinaw pocket she saw that his eyes were bloodshot and oddly smoldering under his bushy gray brows. It was then that this was not the first time he had taken a drink this morning.

Her uneasiness increased to alarm. Now that it was too late, she regretted, with all her heart, that she had not found out more about the man before trusting herself to him on the long, lonely journey to the coast. Her only consolation lay in the fact that Lizzie was with her.

She flashed an appealing glance at the Indian woman huddled on the front of the sled. Lizzie sat stony, impassive, seemingly unaware that there was anything alarming in Stebbins' early drinking on the trail. Her attitude calmed Denny into thinking that it might be the custom of men like Stebbins to refresh themselves from the bottle on a hard trek such as this.

They had been traveling for several hours before Stebbins addressed a word to his wife; and then he spoke in her native tongue, which Denny did not understand.

Lizzie jerked her head up with a startled look; then her black eyes grew angry and she broke into a flood of guttural which suggested heated protest.

Stebbins answered with a loud snuff. But when she continued to expostulate, he suddenly snarled a command which reduced her to cowed silence.

Not long after that he halted the team at a point where a frozen stream merged with the Stikine. The huskies threw themselves belly down on the snow, their panting pink tongues dripping, their slant eyes closed. Denny was glad to climb out of her narrow seat. When Lizzie suddenly handed her a sandwich she ate it and at the same time eased her cramped muscles by walking a short distance along an almost obliterated snowshoe trail leading off up the creek.

Stebbins finished his food and in sudden good humor took another long drink from his bottle.

"All aboard, Mrs. Bourne!" he sang out cheerfully.

She hurried back to the sled and climbed in, but forebore to tuck the robes about her until Lizzie, waiting nearby, should also be seated. Stebbins was busy thrusting articles into a knapsack. When he finished, he tossed the bag to his wife with a harsh, Thaitan command. She picked it up together with a small hatchet and, without a word, began plodding off along the dim snowshoe trail.

Denny, unable to fathom this move, was gazing at her in perplexity when Stebbins' abrupt shout and the crack of his whip sent the huskies leaping forward at a scrambling run.

He gestured with his free hand, flashing a gold-toothed smile. They had rounded a point now that shut off all sight of the creek. "That's all right, Mrs. Bourne. Her brother's trapping back there a ways. The old woman's going to visit him until I get back."

For a moment Denny was stunned by the unexpected turn of events. Then her mind became a turmoil of indecision and alarm. She was just about to leap up and demand that he go back at once to Tarnigan when his voice came casually, reassuringly from back of her. "Don't worry about Lizzie, Mrs. Bourne. She'll be all right."

And with her weight off the sled, you see, I can make much better time, and we'll have to spend only two nights on the trail instead of three.

There was something so matter-of-fact, so reasonable in his tones, that Denny was able to put up an outward show of poise while she considered her situation. She might order him to return, but instinct warned her that his relations with Revelry Bourne were such that he would refuse to do this—after he had accepted Mrs. Revelry Bourne as a passenger obviously fleeing from her husband. Even if he did take her back, the thought of returning to that roof from which she had departed so proudly connoted a lack of courage on her part, besides being in the nature of an anti-climax too ridiculous to be borne.

Plainly the only thing to do was to go with the fellow.

As the afternoon passed, much of her apprehension wore away. Perhaps because she was now facing him, Stebbins refrained from drinking any more. He whistled cheerfully, making no attempt to engage her in conversation save for an occasional inquiry as to her comfort.

But as he rode, balancing easily on the runners, he amused himself for long periods by keeping the sinuous length of his dog whip floating in the air. She was watching the almost imperceptible twitching of the wrist that produced this effect when suddenly his guarded glance moved toward the side of the trail. His shoulders sagged forward to the right; there was a peculiar stiffening of his body that sent her eye following his gaze.

A snowshoe rabbit had leaped out beside the trail, and just as she looked the end of Stebbins' lash caught the creature across the neck, half cutting off its head. It fell backward with a tiny, pitiful sound; and the sled sped past its small form reddening the snow.

Stebbins resumed his upright stance. His gold teeth were gleaming between slightly parted lips; his eyes were half-closed in dreamy contemplation of his lash, hissing out again over the backs of his dogs.

Denny was sick at what she had seen. Then a new thought sent a shiver through her. From a distance Stebbins could lay the tip of that whip across the eyes of a man, a woman, maiming and blinding as surely as if he had slashed with a knife.

A little after three the sun went down in a blaze of crimson behind a pearl-blue range.

"Well, Mrs. Bourne," Stebbins announced cheerily, "we'll make Taylor's Number Two cabin—our first camp—just in time."

A hundred yards or so from the river they came into a small clearing in which a log cabin loomed dimly in the fading light.

Stebbins halted his team before it and Denny got out of the sled. She had known the place was deserted but she was not prepared for the depressing atmosphere that hung about it.

She turned from her survey of the doubtful shelter to see Stebbins standing very still in the twilight. He was sniffing the air with nostrils that widened and twitched, while his wary eyes moved swiftly, making a narrow inspection of the evening sky above the encircling wall of frozen trees. There was something mysterious and frightening in his attitude that sent a prickle along Denny's spine.

"What is it," she whispered.

"Thought I caught a whiff of wood smoke. Do you smell anything?"

Relieved by his casual question, she shook her head. To her there seemed nothing to indicate that any human being, other than themselves, had been within miles of the place for years.

Stebbins, after kicking away the snow, thrust his moss-lined foot against the door and forced its creaking hinges.

This Was Shanghai's Most Luxurious Hotel

A view of the entrance to the Palace Hotel, in the International Settlement at Shanghai, is shown after it had been struck by a bomb dropped by one of the Japanese planes which have been making the big buildings of the stricken city a target since hostilities broke out. Note the rickshaw coolie, killed by a shell fragment, lying in the doorway. Scores were killed, many mutilated beyond belief by the high explosive air bombs.

It swung back, one corner scraping the earthen floor. A smell of mildew came out. Stebbins did not enter at once but, bending his head cautiously forward, played his flashlight about the dark interior.

"Could be worse," he commented; and stepped inside.

To Denny the place was incredibly horrible. But Stebbins was at home immediately, tapping soot out of the dilapidated stove-pipe, kindling a fire with the seasoned shavings he found on top of the stove, and shoving a few sticks of wood into the rusty firebox.

When the flames were roaring up the pipe, his eyes swept the room until they encountered a six-foot length of two-by-four timber, which leaned against the wall by the door. He hesitated a moment, flicking Denny with a sly glance, then laid hold of the length of wood and, drawing out his belt ax, began to chop it into short pieces.

"Keep the fire going with these," he directed, gathering up the chunks and dumping them beside the stove. "I'll feed the dogs and get some water."

When he returned to the cabin with a pail of water, Denny had a good fire going. He brought in several armfuls of wood, kicked the old papers out of doors, and then began with the deftness of long practice to prepare a meal.

In an unbelievably short time supper was on the slab table—moose steaks, canned beans, bannock and a pot of tea.

They had been eating only a few minutes when Denny noted with surprise that Stebbins neither gulped his food nor swooped his tea. More astonishing yet, he removed his spoon from his tin cup before he drank, and placed his knife and fork across the edge of his granite plate instead of propping them up on each side, with the handles resting on the table.

Was this an evidence of table manners so imbedded in youth that they lingered on in the man, despite his later years of crude and careless wilderness life? Had he known a genteel upbringing and degenerated into the renegade white he was today? And had she, or had she not, noticed that his English was at times singularly good. As these questions ran through her mind, they brought her, instead of comfort, a new sense of unease and alarm; though she didn't know why.

FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS SET

Army Engineers "Ready To Go" On Ohio River Improvements

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The army engineers said today they are "ready to go" on Ohio river valley flood control projects authorized by the recent congress.

They said, however, the program depends on the ability of communities along the river to meet requirements of a bill providing $24,000,000 for flood walls and other works in the valley.

The bill stipulates that local governments must buy land, easements and rights of way needed for the projects. President Roosevelt is given discretionary power to direct federal aid in such purchases to the extent of 50 per cent where communities show they are unable to bear all the expense.

Engineers said plans for many projects already were drawn and awaited only reports on the ability of local authorities to cooperate financially. These reports are being assembled by Col. R. G. Powell, division engineer at Cincinnati, and probably will be received here next week.

One official said projects would be abandoned in communities unable to meet financial requirements of the new legislation, passed after President Roosevelt asked congress to defer until next year action on an $800,000,000 flood control program covering the entire country.

The same person reported that cities and towns having available funds must show in writing their legal authority to use them for flood control projects. This authority will be subject to approval by the secretary of war.

The board of army engineers said there was a possibility that projects would get under way this year in sections meeting all requirements of the measure promptly.

The game was played amicably and the Christians won, 5-4.

Labor Day — decreed in honor of all who work

One of our most significant national holidays, declared by Congress in 1894. A day on which everyone celebrates the right of man to work with his hands equally with the man who works with his brain. It seems an appropriate time to suggest that every worker should save a portion of the money he receives in return for his labor.

Even rubber suits this year sport flared skirts, and the silk, rayon and cotton fabrics are so designed as to remain well-moulded at all times, even upon emergence from the water, formerly the bugaboo of the fabric suit. The wind-blown damsel with the beach bag, top, right in sketch, wears a fabric in nubby print, with a shirred bodice top. God had the program that would be a fair and just plan for every people and every person. Man through his selfishness and spirit of greed did not adopt this plan that the Holy Bible so clearly and plainly sets forth. The kingdom of God by its teaching and its practice can bring about real social justice."

McCarthy Wonders When "Wonder Team" Will Start Clouting

YANKEE POWER LOST AS BATS ARE SILENCED

Joe McCarthy Ponders As Yanks Hit Serious Hitting Slump

By SID FEDER

Joe McCarthy is beginning to agree that he has a "wonder" team in his New York Yankees. He "wonders" when they're going to start hitting again.

While the National league snarl featuring the Giants and Cubs, with the Dodgers as chief jokers, has been drawing the spotlight on the baseball stage recently, things have been happening to those Yanks.

With a nine-game lead in the American league the Yanks haven't any immediate worry, such as the bogey-man which is haunting the Giants, whose National league edge was a mere half-a-game today, and threatened still further by their chief haters, the Dodgers.

But the fact remains that the once-mighty Yankees are in such a hitting slump that even rookie pitchers are finding it something less than a day's labor to knock them off. Although the team as a whole is hitting only 256 since the doldrums caught up with them, it's largely due to the fact that the three big guns—Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey—seem to be loaded with nothing more explosive than wet powder these days.

The second-place Tigers are also finding it tough to keep themselves untrunked.

Rookie Ken Chase, whose only previous claim to fame was based on a decision he earned over Bob Feller, handed Gehrig and company its third straight beating yesterday. He handcuffed the heavy hitters, allowed only seven hits altogether, and finished on top, 4-2. Since the Tigers trounced the White Sox, 4-3, this defeat cut a full game from the Yankee lead.

The big doings of the day, were staged at the Polo Grounds. The Daffy Dodgers, never having so much fun as when they're plugging the donkey's tail on their long time feudists, really knocked the ears off the Giants, clubbing out 19 hits for a 15-7 victory. This defeat shaved the Giants' lead to a bare half-game over the idle Cubs.

The Indians featured a nine-run eighth inning to vault the Browns, 15-3. The Bees put on a five-run spree in the tenth to take the Phillies, 7-2, for Jim Turner's 16th pitching win. The Reds had a seven-run fifth frame to take the Cardinals, 9-1, in a night game.

Like the Cubs, the Pirates in the National league and the Red Sox and Athletics in the American had the day off.

EARLEY HURLS NO-HITTER TO WIN FOR VETS

Old Timers' Mound Star Fans 8 As Veterans Gain Victory

George (Slim) Earley of the Old Timers, 1937 champions of the Class A Softball league, evidently believes in winding up the season in a blaze of glory.

Earley made his final 1937 softball appearance out at Centennial park last evening and turned in a no-hit game as he pitched the Old Timers to a 5 to 0 win over the Emmanuel Lutherans, champions of the Class B league.

Earley's no-hitter was the third pitched in the city leagues during the 1937 season. Dale Ritchie of the Salem Chinas and Bill Pauline of the Emmanuel had the other perfect games.

In accomplishing his no-hit task, Earley, who led all Class A pitchers for the season with a record of 21 wins and two defeats, struck out eight batters and allowed only one man to reach first base.

Gordy Melow was the only one of the Emmanuel able to get on the No. 1 sack. He reached first on a walk in the fifth inning.

The Old Timers supported Earley's pitching job by collecting eight hits from Pitchers Martin and Bill Pauline of the Emmanuel to score once in each the third, fourth and fifth innings and twice in the sixth frame.

Ted Scott and Jim Primm led the veterans in hitting with Scott getting three blows in four times at bat and Primm collecting two bingles in four trips to the plate.

Wholesale Shift In Coaching Ranks Marks Opening Of 1937 Grid Season

Championship Elevens of Last Year Must Overcome Tough Competition If They Retain Their Titles

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Football promises to reach a new season is just around the corner and throughout United States coaches are studying the performance of their young hopefuls and attempting to figure out winning combinations.

Competition has been getting keener each season in every gridiron conference throughout the country. No longer do a few schools dominate the picture and stand out above all others. The task of selecting a mythical All-American team at the end of the season grows more difficult, as the general calibre of players improves and the number included in the pickin parade increases.

Numerous Coaching Changes
And indications are that the 1937 season will be bigger and better than ever. Many of the luminaries of last year will be missing because of graduation, but the quality of football promises to reach a new level. Professional football, too, is coming into its own and several new members have been added to the list of cities represented.

One of the interesting developments to watch this season will be the luck of several big-time coaches who have changed schools and are now mentoring new outfits. The shakeup in the coaching ranks since the close of the gridiron season last year has been greater than for some time.

Ossie Solem will be on hand at Syracuse this year, replacing Bill Hanson, and trying to put the New Yorkers back on the football map. Although his record at University of Iowa was not spectacular the Hawkeye material was hardly up to the level of Big Ten competition and he acquired himself rather well.

At Nebraska, Biff Jones, former directing genius of Tennessee, will be trying to keep up the impressive record established by Dana Bible. The Cornhuskers are noted as a consistently good outfit and Jones will have plenty to work with although he faces a tough schedule this season. As for Coach Bible, this astute gridiron authority will be guiding the destinies of University of Texas where he replaces John Chevigny. Competition in the southwestern league is keen and Bible will have his hands full if he brings the Texans out on top.

Bill Kern is the new mentor at Carnegie Tech, replacing Howard Harpster. Tech has had some rather bad luck in the past couple seasons and Kern is faced with the job of building up the morale and reputation of the school. John Driscoll replaces Frank Murray at Marquette which has won something of the reputation of a giant-killer.

Pittsburgh Looms Strong
Schools which won the six major championships in the country last year will have a tough time if they repeat. Yale captured the eastern collegiate crown; Northwestern emerged winner in the Big Ten; Washington topped the Pacific coast outfit; Pittsburgh ruled in that sector; Duke finished on top in the southern league, and Louisiana State was strongest of the southwestern schools. All of these schools have suffered heavy losses from graduation, although Pittsburgh is apparently in the best position to repeat.

"I knew I had the record then," said Picard, on the short 199-yard 18th, surrounded by hundreds of golf followers. Picard was on with his tee shot, putted to within inches of the cup and holed out in par three.

The gallery cheered as Picard finished. "It's a pleasure to sign this card," said big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, who with Judd Brumley, Greenville, Tenn., amateur, had played with Picard.

Picard, who captured the Hershey Open last year, was a heavy favorite to again win the $1,200 first prize. The field, reduced to those with 148 or better, entered the third round today.

TARBORO HORSE HAS GOOD TIME

Symbol Hal Turns In Top Performance As Fair Ends Racing

COLUMBUS, Sept. 4.—Symbol Hal, winner of the Ohio State fair Grand Circuit program's last day feature yesterday, made the best time of the day, pacing the mile in 2:04.

The event, the $1,000 2:13 pace stake, was won in straight heats. The bay horse, owned by E. R. Dail of Tarboro, N. C., was driven by Dr. Hugh M. Marshall of Urbana. Kate Kennon, chestnut mare owned by J. J. Mooney of Fremont, and driven by Jake Mahoney, won the 2:16 trot for a $500 purse. The best time was 2:07.

The lone spill of the five-day meeting took place in the third race when Dorothy Boo, driven by Jimmy Devore, fell and demolished the sulky when Callie G. broke. Gilt Hanover won the race, a two-year-old pace stake for a $1,000 stake. Gilt Hanover, owned by the Biery farm at Butler, Pa., was driven by Charlie Lacey. Best time was 2:11.

Baldy C. Grattan, owned by J. E. Crosbie of Tulsa, Okla., and driven by Warren Dennis, took the 2:18 class pace for a $500 purse in a best time of 2:06 1/2.

SCHEMLING TO GET CRACK AT BROWN BOMBER

German signed for Heavyweight With Louis Next June

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Approximately two years after he won a title "shot" by knocking out Joe Louis in 12 rounds, Max Schmeling will get to fight Louis for the world heavyweight championship next June.

The announcement that the German clouter had been signed for the bout came yesterday as no particular surprise. Fight fans had been expecting Mike Jacobs to attend to that affair as soon as he got the more pressing matter of Joe's title defense against Tommy Farr out of the way. For Schmeling, however, it was a matter of considerable importance.

When he whipped Louis back in June, 1936, Max, a former champion himself, automatically superseded Joe as No. 1 challenger for the crown worn by Jimmy Braddock. He signed up to fight in September, then came back from Germany to sign all over again when Braddock developed arthritis in his hands and said he couldn't fight.

Then came an offer for Braddock to defend the crown against Louis in Chicago last June and Max made another transatlantic trip, which ended in his training for the "phantom" bout after losing practically every round in a bitter court struggle.

Schmeling lost again when he passed up Mike Jacobs' offer of a 30 per cent cut in the gate—the same share that Louis would get—for a title bout this fall and decided to tackle Tommy Farr, the British empire champion, instead. Jacobs beat him on that one by offering Farr a bigger purse and persuading him to come here and fight Louis instead.

All that led up to a five-hour conference yesterday at which differences were patched up and every detail of the fight, except the exact date and the place where it will be held, was settled.

The main points of the contract Schmeling signed are these: The title bout will take place "somewhere in the United States" in June.

Schmeling will get 20 per cent of the net receipts and a substantial slice of the radio and movie revenue. Louis will get 40 per cent.

His average speed of 258 miles an hour was 54 miles an hour better than that set by two Italian airmen, Samuel Cupini and Amadeo Paradisi, over a course some 3,500 miles long in the last great international speed contest.

The Italians flew a triangular course, Istres-Damascus-Paris. Fuller's course to Cleveland was 2,042 miles long.

In beating the 5-year-old record of Jimmy Hazel by 24 minutes, Bendix mark of 10 hours, 2 minutes 28 seconds, Fuller collected $13,000 in prize money. Fuller's time from Burbank to Bendix field was 9 hours 35 minutes.

The lone woman entrant in the Bendix, Jacqueline Cochran, of Indio, Calif., claimed $5,500 for third place—collecting $2,500 for being the first (and only) woman to finish—and Earl Ortman, of Long Beach, Calif., got $5,000 for second place.

Officers Vainly Search For Men Who Shot Two Policemen

Martin Donnelly, wounded in the shoulder and finger.

Cornette was released from the Ohio penitentiary last Dec. 10 on a sick parole. He had been serving a life term for murder, being convicted June 23, 1924, from Washington county. He formerly lived in Portsmouth but had been in Hamilton recently.

The shooting occurred at the end of a search for the abductors of Robert M. Smith, a cafe proprietor, who was picked up on a downtown street and robbed of $1,200, then released several miles away.

Fury, Randolph and Donnelly trailed them to Crystal lake, found the car parked behind a cottage, and called for the occupants to come out.

Receiving no answer, the officers forced a window and climbed in the house.

Spotting a man crouching with a gun in his hand, Donnelly said the officers began firing. Fury was shot in the back from a closet.

The cornered quarry made a break from the cottage, only to run into gun fire from other peace officers who had surrounded the place. Two dashed through the line of officers. Cornette and Chap-

ANNUAL STATE FAIR SUCCESS

Officials Hail 87th Renewal of Show As Best Ever

COLUMBUS, Sept. 4.—Exhibitors packed up today to return to their homes from the Ohio State fair or to move on to other expositions as Ohio fair officials hailed the 87th show as the best ever.

The only time in its history that the fair ever paid its own way, it played to a total of approximately 400,000 persons in seven days. About 40,000 were on the grounds yesterday.

A $750,000 building program advocated by Director of Agriculture Earl H. Hanefeld and endorsed in principle by Gov. Martin L. Davey was in prospect for next year if the legislature sees fit to appropriate money for it. Some exhibits were refused this year because of lack of space.

An 18-year-old Columbus Grove boy, Richard Bowers, who said he ate everything he wanted, was adjudged the healthiest 4-H club boy in the state. Donna Oxender, 15, of Kindie, Williams county, was selected as the healthiest girl. They will take part in a national 4-H club contest.

The grand championship in sheep shearing went to W. L. Welsh of Radnor. H. W. Locke of Mechanistown won the state championship and Eugene Campbell, 18, of Oakdale, took the junior prize.

The Lake county 4-H team placed first in the vegetable judging competition. Lorain was second and Franklin third.

Decline In Meat Prices Due Soon, Experts Declare

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Housewives who have been howling about the high cost of meat had the word of government experts today that prices had reached a peak and declines would follow shortly.

Charts on retail meat prices at the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showed they had touched seven year highs recently—especially for tender juicy steaks and savory pork chops.

The economists said high prices were caused by droughts and business recovery.

The decline will come, the economists predicted, as a result of larger crops and protests by the public over high costs.

They said meat prices usually are highest about this time of year and gradually taper off till early spring when they turn upward.

The American Federation of Labor, stating living costs in July were 4.3 per cent higher than during the same month last year, declared workers will be forced to a lower living standard this fall unless their pay checks are at least 5 per cent larger than in 1936.

True To Life

DALLAS, Tex.—Gypsy Rose Lee, strip tease star who is here on a trailer honeymoon with her husband, Robert Mizz, was invited to a bull fight. Miss Lee, who won fame for her ability to undress artfully in public, surveyed her scanty trailer wardrobe.

"But I have nothing to wear," she moaned.
